ANOTHER OIL TEST PLANNED

QUITMAN STOCKHOLDERS DECIDE TO TRY AGAIN.

ON A NEW LOCATION

"Doodlebug" Prediction Gains Supporters As Result of Sand Found at 1,300 Feet.

Decision to drill another test well on a new location was made yesterday afternoon by the stockholders of the Quitman Oil and Gas Co., meeting at the location of the first and unsuccessful well.

The location of the new well has not been decided definitely, but it is likely that it will be north of the first well, which was dry at 1,700 feet.

The decision to drill again came after talks by Howard P. Manning, geologist, and G. H. Rose, drilling contractor, in which they expressed the opinion that oil was almost sure to be found somewhere on the Quitman-Skidmore structure at a depth corresponding to that at which nine feet of oil sand was found in the first well. A showing of oil was found in this sand but it was not in a commercial quantity.

Some of the stockholders place faith in a "doodlebug" test, made some time ago, before the drilling of the first well. The "doodlebug," a device which its followers declare can locate from above the underground sources of oil, registered a 240-barrel well at 1,300 feet at a point about a mile north of the first test. Little weight was given this finding at first, but the discovery of a sand at 1,300 feet in the first well has made several "doodlebug" converts.

For the first well, a total of $9,500 was raised by the company. The drilling itself cost $7,225, and the payment of freight and hauling charges, incorporation fees, and other expenses is expected to leave only about $200 in the treasury. On the other hand the second well will cost less to drill and there will be few incidental expenses.

Five shares of the first stock issue were unsold, and the stockholders decided to offer these to the public, but to give the members of the company first chance on the new issue. Twenty of the twenty-five shareholders at the meeting then subscribed for additional shares, and four of the five old shares were sold to "outsiders."

Two of the old shares were taken by Contractor Rose, one by James Huff and one by Henry Smith and Floyd Money. Mr. Smith was one of those who accompanied the "doodlebug" operator on his test.

The stockholders who subscribed for additional shares were John Dowden, Fred Smith, John Price, Roy Morgan, Harry Hoblitzell, Frank Goslee, Van Goslee, William Carr, Frank Bailey, George Owens, Rue Peters, Joe Carden, O. T. Carr, Linville Brothers, A. S. Cordell, Ray Blackney, A. L. Oakerson, Roy Slauson, S. O. Keever, William Barry, H. E. Owens and J. J. McDonald and Co.

Another meeting of the stockholders will be held at the rig Monday, and the casing will be pulled from the first test hole at this time.

Dramatics Club at H. S. Meets Today

The Dramatics Club of the Maryville High School held its first meeting of the 1926 term this morning at the activity period. Miss Mildred Sandison was elected to fill the office of vice-president, to succeed the place formerly held by her brother, Forte Sandison who was unable to belong to the organization this year.

The officers of the year, elected last semester, aside from the office filled by Miss Sandison are:

President, Carl LeRoy Fisher; secretary-treasurer, Leola Miller.

Miss Anna R. Crane, in charge of public speaking at the high school, has been made coach of dramatics this year to succeed the place formerly held by Miss Augusta Quell who plans to enter another line of activity.

Married by Judge Sayler.

G. C. Wilson and Miss Ruby Lewis, both of Ravenwood were married late yesterday afternoon by Judge J. H. Sayler, justice of peace, in the rest rooms at the court house. The couple were accompanied here by the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Mitt Wilson of Ravenwood.

Mayor Not Opposed to Placing Markers

White Way Poles Are Maintained by Electric Company and Decision Was Up to Them, Says Garrett.

"I did not object to placing Federal highway markers on the White Way poles if it met with the approval of the Maryville Electric Light & Power Co.," Mayor W. O. Garrett said today in regard to the article regarding the markers in yesterday's Democrat-Forum. Continuing Mayor Garrett said:

"The White Way poles are maintained by the light company and if they had no objection to the placing of these markers, I am sure there is none on the part of the city administration."

Mayor Garrett denied he gave any order for the removal of these markers.

The light company had no objections to the use of its poles, and the delay in erection of the markers was slight. The work was continued and the signs are up today.

SEES NEED OF PLAYGROUNDS

FOR LESS FORTUNATE

Children Who Are Denied Other Advantages Should Be Conisdered, Says Physician.

"A playground for the children and some sort of community house for visitors, as well as our own citizens, are Maryville's two greatest needs," said Dr. R. C. Person, commenting today on the suggestion of Mrs. Hugh Strong at the opening meeting of the Twentieth Century Club.

"We need playgrounds and parks, too," Dr. Person said, "but of the two I would put the playgrounds first.

"The first requisite of a playground," he continued, "is that it be centrally located and in the section that needs it worst. Our College Park is fine for those living in the west part of town and for those who have automobiles, but it does not serve the children who really need a playground, the children of parents who have no automobiles and few home comforts."

Dr. Person quoted a statement made to him by a juvenile judge of Omaha, his former home, in which the jurist declared the courts' burden had been greatly reduced since the provision of public playgrounds.

"What is true in Omaha is true in Maryville, on a smaller scale," Dr. Person asserted.

The woman's restroom in the courthouse does not entirely solve the community house need, the doctor said.

"Just a day or two ago, a man from out of town asked me if there was a place where his wife could go while he transacted his business," he illustrated. "I directed him to the restroom, but he said they had been there already and found it closed. We need a place which would be open to our visitors in the evenings, especially Saturdays, as well as during the day, some place where mothers may take their babies, some place where farmers may hold their meetings and feel at home without going through a lot of red tape.

"Our city could easily do these things; it is rich enough to do much more. And I believe a children's playground would make good citizens of some children who might otherwise go wrong. The saving in court costs and in charitable work would go a long way toward meeting the cost."

Frank M. Burch Is Killed in Colorado

George H. Burch of Pickering Leaves Denver Following Receipt of Death Message.

George H. Burch of Pickering left Wednesday night for Denver, Colo., where he was called by the death of his father, Frank M. Burch, who was killed in an accident Wednesday morning. Mr. Burch formerly lived near Pickering, moving to Kansas and later to Colorado thirty-five years ago. He was 79 years old.

Besides the son in Pickering, he is survived by his widow, another son, M. W. Burch of Denver, and a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Dehoff of Salt Lake City.

Eugene Marshall of St. Joseph came yesterday to visit his mother, who is ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Thompson.

ENROLLMENT NEXT TUESDAY

COLLEGE FRESHMEN TO MATRICULATE THEN.

OTHERS OE WEDNESDAY

Demonstration School To Open Thursday, With Quota Long Since Filled, Phillips Announces.

The fall quarter at the State Teachers College will open at 8 o'clock next Tuesday morning, when all freshmen students will enroll for classes. Tuesday will be Freshman Day, and no sophomores or upperclassmen will be allowed to matriculate on that day.

Wednesday will be registration day for sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Freshmen will attend classes on that day. All freshmen who register later than Tuesday will be forced to pay a late-enrollment fee. This ruling was made, not to increase revenue, but to make it possible for freshmen to enroll on Tuesday when the entire faculty time will be given over to first year students.

A. H. Cooper will be freshman advisor this year. All course cards will be approved by him before freshman may attend classes.

Freshman Day will include a luncheon for the first-year students Tuesday at noon and an entertainment for them at night.

Classes for sophomores and upperclassmen will start at 8 o'clock Thursday morning. All who enroll after 6 o'clock Wednesday afternoon will be assessed the late-enrollment fee.

The faculty council, comprising the department chairmen at the college, will meet Monday morning for a final conference before the beginning of the fall quarter. At this time all matters pertaining to classes will be settled.

The College Demonstration School will have its first session on Thursday, Homer T. Phillips, chairman of the education department, announced this morning. Parents of all students who attended the school last year and those who have already made arrangements are asked to have their children at school Thursday morning.

The quota for the Demonstration School has long since been reached. There have been a great many parents who have been turned down because facilities make it necessary to limit the enrollment.

"We are regretful that we are unable to accommodate the unprecedented number of applicants, but we aren't willing to over-crowd the school," Mr. Phillips said today.

Miss Mary E. Keith, supervisor of the school last year, will again be in charge this year.

From the number of requests for catalogs and information at the College office, it is said that indications are that the enrollment this fall will be on a par with that of last year. Numbers of persons have been coming to the College daily to investigate courses of study and to ask about rooms.

Private School Is Opened This Week

Miss Murl Pilcher Has Eleven Pupils In Classes Being Conducted At Conception Junction.

Miss Murl Pilcher, who was one of the teachers barred by the new set of directors from teaching in the Conception Junction schools, has been placed in charge of a private school at that place. Eleven pupils are attending the primary classes which are being conducted in the study at the Methodist Church in Conception Junction.

The private school is not sectarian and is being financed by patrons of the school district who were so well pleased with Miss Pilcher's work done in the Conception Junction schools last year that they desired her for an instructor of the primary grades.

Miss Pilcher had contracted to teach in the Conception Junction public schools again this year but was restrained from doing that work by the present school directors who did not agree with the selection of faculty made by the former board.

Joe Jackson, III, will leave Sunday to spend a few days with friends in Kansas City and Lexington. He expects to go to Des Moines, Ia., next Thursday where he will enter Drake University. He was graduated from the high school department of Wentworth Military Academy at Lexington this year.

Duck Season Opens in Less Than Week

License Business Picks Up At County Clerk's Office.—Birds Reported Plentiful.

With the duck season in Missouri opening less than one week from today, on Sept. 16, a rush for hunting licenses is expected at the county clerk's office during the next six days. Already business is picking up, according to Fred Wright, deputy county clerk.

John Wallace, deputy game and fish commissioner for this district, stated today he had received reports from the north that there is an abundance of ducks in that section. With the first tinge of winter heavy flights are expected through this section as Maryville is on a direct route for flights from the north to the gulf states.

Recent rains have filled the lakes with plenty of water and local sportsmen are anticipating one of the best duck seasons in this section in years.

Mr. Wallace stated that sportsmen who contemplated hunting ducks should not fail to secure their hunting license to avoid all trouble as state and federal officers will keep a close watch during the season.

NOT IN FAVOR OF A MERGER

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION MEETS OPPOSITION.

STOCKHOLDERS OBJECT

Plan For Combining Three Southern Lines Brings Petition From Minority Shareholders.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Plans of L. F. Loree to form a large railroad merger in the Southwest were attacked today before the Interstate Commerce Commission by minority holders of the St. Louis Southwestern.

Loree has applied to merge the St. Louis Southwestern; Missouri, Kansas and Texas and the Kansas City Southern. Such a combination would not be in the public interest, said the minority stockholders' petition, which seeks the rejection of the application.

The petition said the combination would disrupt the existing system, would eliminate competition, would not make for economy or increased efficiency and would endanger the minority stockholders. The petition further declared the Loree scheme does not conform to the tentative plan of the commission for the consolidation of railroads but "departs from it by including the Kansas City Southern which was assigned to the Missouri Pacific system and by excluding the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad system, which forms the nucleus of the Frisco, Katy and Cotton Belt system.

Moreover, the petition stated, the Cottonbelt was very important and traffic relations with the Southern Pacific are in danger.

No provision for the protection of the minority stockholders of the Cottonbelt was included in the Katy application, the petition said.

"Pending a more logical and advantageous grouping from the standpoint of the company's stockholders and the public than the grouping proposed by the Loree plan," the petition reads, "it is believed that the matter should be temporarily suspended."

FRANCE READY TO QUIT WAR

BRIAND, AT LEAGUE MEET, IN PLEA FOR PEACE.

GERMANY INTO FOLD

French Foreign Minister Makes Dramatic Address In Welcoming Former Enemies Into League.

Geneva, Sept. 10.—"For France this day means we are finished with war. Machine guns have yielded to peace. We have had enough glories on the battlefields to satisfy both of us."

With his hands extended toward the German delegation, Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, uttered these dramatic words today in welcoming Germany, long France's traditional enemy, into the League of Nations amid epochal scenes of enthusiasm.

Herr Stresemann, Germany's foreign minister, had prefaced Germany's entrance into the League with a speech declaring Germany's policy to be one of peace and he voiced a plea for general disarmament.

M. Briand replied to Herr Stresemann with a speech that must go down in history as marking the final ending of the great World War, a speech that pledged France to consider Germany as a friend in the future.

When M. Briand had finished his dramatic utterances, the German delegation arose from their seats and applauded wildly, showing signs of great emotion.

M. Briand, slow moving and unexcitable, arose from his seat when Herr Stresemann had concluded his speech and with no effort for dramatics, stretched his hands toward the seats where the German delegates sat with a welcoming gesture.

"For France, this day means we are finished with war," said M. Briand, and there was his usual pause. "Gone are the days of machine guns, trenches and bloody battles," continued the French foreign minister. "There will be no more war between us."

Then the old French leader broke the dramatic awe which had marked his words and interspersed a few pleasantries to Herr Stresemann only to return to the deadly earnestness of his speech.

Mrs. John W. Shipps, Old Resident, Dies

Funeral Services Will Be Held at Home at 2 o'Clock Tomorrow Afternoon.

Mrs. John W. Shipps, 75 years old, a resident of Nodaway County for fifty-two years, died at 5:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon at her home, 726 West First street, following a two years' illness of a complication of diseases. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the family home, conducted by Dr. C. C. James, pastor of the First Methodist Church. Burial will be in Miriam cemetery.

Mary Bell Heisler was born near Harlem Springs, Ohio, Aug. 28, 1851. She lived in her native state until about eighteen years old, when she moved with her parents to a farm near Plattsburg, Mo. She was married to John W. Shipps, Nov. 9, 1871, at Lathrop, Mo., and for a few years their home was on a farm near Plattsburg. They located in Nodaway County in the fall of 1874 and for a number of years lived on a farm, five miles south of Maryville. They moved to the present home on West First street nine years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Shipps celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a family reunion on Nov. 9, 1921.

Mrs. Shipps had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since childhood. She was a charter member of both the Arkoe M. E. Church and the Swan Chapel church, which she and her husband assisted in building.

Surviving Mrs. Shipps are her husband, four daughters and five sons, all of whom are here for the funeral. They are: Mrs. Charles Porter, Mrs. Will Espey and Mrs. Frank Gray of Maryville, Mrs. Fay Corrough, Arkoe; Charles Shipps, Barnard; Joe Shipps, Pomona, Kan.; Lloyd Shipps, Ottawa, Kan.; Otis Shipps, Overbrook, Kan.; and Ray Shipps, Wichita, Kan. She also leaves two sisters: Mrs. C. C. Kelly of Welda, Kan., and Mrs. A. E. Hartzell of Lathrop, Mo., and one brother, John A. Heisler, also of Lathrop.

Report "Al" Smith Will Be Candidate

Rumor Current At Albany, N. Y., That Governor Has Consented To His Renomination Again.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Governor Alfred Smith has consented to accept renomination at the Democratic state convention which meets in Syracuse September 27 and 28, according to a report at the capital today following a conference at the executive mansion of Democratic leaders with the governor.

Governor Smith did not discuss the report but he did admit the leaders had been in conference with him at the mansion where he is recovering from his recent illness.

According to reports, the leaders are said to have agreed to nominate Robert F. Wagner, supreme court justice of New York, for the United States Senate to oppose Senator James W. Wadsworth, jr.

WILL OPPOSE CANCELLATION

NON-PARTISAN DRIVE IS NOW IN MAKING.

BOTH PARTIES JOIN

Senator Pat Harrison Indicates That Woodrow Wilson Was In Favor Of Collection Of War Debts.

Washington, Sept. 10.—A non-partisan drive to arouse the American people to oppose the propaganda for cancellation of the ten-billion-dollar foreign debts to the United States was in the making today following the declaration of Senator Pat Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, that "every advocate of cancellation should be defeated in the November election irrespective of party."

With both the Republican and Democratic parties pledged to the collection of debts and the treasury department firmly opposed to cancellation, Harrison urged the voters to take the question out of politics by the election only of candidates who favor the collection of the money due America.

Incidentally, Harrison's announcement was taken as a notice to the cancellation advocates that their proposal would find but little sympathy among followers of the late Woodrow Wilson.

In fact, the war President was opposed to the cancellation of the debts, according to his friends, and he so informed his confidents in the closing days of his life. At the proper time, it was intimated, the Wilson attitude will be made known should the cancellation move show any signs of meeting with popular endorsement.

Rivals Gain When Cardinals Drop One

Boston Overwhelms St. Louis, While Pirates Take First Game From Cincinnati.

Boston, Sept. 10.—The St. Louis Cardinals lost the first game of their series with the Boston Braves this afternoon by a score of 11 to 3. Alexander for St. Louis started the game but was replaced in the last half of the seventh by Rinehart. In that inning Boston made six runs. Benton started for Boston and Mogridge finished. O'Farrell and J. Taylor were the catchers.

St. Louis made ten hits and three errors, while the Braves piled up eighteen safeties and made no bobbles.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10.—Rallying to score three runs after two were down in the eighth, the world champion ittsburgh Pirates defeated the Cincinnati Reds 5 to 2 in the first game of a double-header here this afternoon.

It was the fifth start in three days for the Pirates and their fourth victory.

Trailing 2 to 0 as they went into the seventh, the Reds knotted the score when catcher Hargrave hit a homer with one man on. The Pittsburgh rally was led by Waner who singled. Successive singles by Cuyler, Wright and Grantham, an error by Zitzman and a wild throw by Pipp resulted in the winning scores. Kremer was the pitcher for Pittsburgh and Rixey for Cincinnati.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10.—Cincinnati was leading in their second game with Pittsburgh today by a score of 5 to 2 at the end of the eighth inning.

The batteries for Cincinnati were Lucas and Picinich, and for Pittsburgh, Morrison and Smith.

NEW CHANNEL RECORD MADE

FRENCHMAN CROSSES WATER IN 11 HRS., 6 MIN.

"I'VE BEAT GERMAN"

Previous Low Mark Made By Ernest Vierkotten On August 30.—Champion Apparently Had Reserve Left.

St. Martin's Bay, Eng., Sept. 10.—Georges Michel, veteran French swimmer, broke the world's record for swimming the English Channel here early today when he completed the crossing in eleven hours and six minutes.

"I have beat the German" were Michel's first words as he staggered up the deserted bay.

Leaving Cape Gris Nez, France at 8:32 o'clock last night, Michel arrived on shore here at 7:38 o'clock this morning, conquering the channel within eight minutes of the goal he had set for himself.

With a broad grin covering his face, the new world's champion of channel swimmers went immediately to the Green Man, a tavern, and called for whisky.

Michel lowered the record set August 30 by Ernest Vierkotten, who swam the channel in twelve hours and forty-two minutes. The new champion had hopped to arrive by 7:30 o'clock.

"If I don't arrive at the English coast by 7:30 o'clock Friday morning, it will be a great shock to me," he said before leaving Cape Gris Nez. But he downed on arrival a big double Scotch whisky at the Green Man apparently well satisfied with the swim as well as the drink.

He washed off a heavy coat of grease that covered his body, ate a hearty breakfast and set out by automobile for Folkestone.

No Need for Worry by Drys, Wheeler Says

Anti-Saloon League Counsel Declares Defeat Of Lenroot Was Only Defeat Suffered By Prohibition.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Wayne B. Wheeler, Anti-Saloon League counsel, held today that the drys have won many victories and had only one defeat, in the recent primaries. The one defeat, Wheeler said, was the failure of Lenroot of Wisconsin to be renominated.

Representative Upshaw, Democrat, Georgia, who was defeated by Leslie J. Steele "can do more harm to the wets outside of Congress than in," Wheeler asserted.

Lenroot was defeated by factional politics, not because of his stand on the liquor issue, the dry leader declared.

BEES' LANGUAGE

American bee experts are trying to determine the language of bees. It is a difficult and fascinating subject.

There can be no doubt, from ordinary observation of bees' activities, that they communicate with each other in some way. Maeterlinck, in his "Life of the Bee," suggests that they do it possibly with their antennae, as ants appear to.

An American specialist recently gave it as his belief that the bees have a dance language—they convey ideas to each other by executing various dancing patterns with their feet. Something of the sort seems to occur when a bee returns to the hive with good or bad news of any kind.

Others suggest that there are really three modes of communication among the bees, operating by sound, sight and smell. One of the most interesting possibilities is that if they have voices and use them at a pitch now inaudible to human ears, we may eventually come to hear and understand them by means of the microphone.

In any event, there are none of God's creatures outside of man more worth studying than these same wonderful bees, with their highly organized community life and their successful solution of some social and political problems regarding which man is still experimenting.

STEAM MOTORS

The steamer automobiles of a decade or two ago have vanished, but they may come back. The latest thing along this line is a steam-propelled bus, for which these claims are made:

"The new car can accelerate from stop to full speed without a jerk, under the worst traffic conditions. It can maintain a speed of one-quarter to one-half mile an hour under any road conditions. Even on down grades the bus can be controlled or brought to a dead stop by the engine alone. No brakes are necessary."

This leaves a motorist a bit dizzy. Consider the further statements that the steam car has pistons and cylinders revolving around a fixed shaft, and the fire is electrically controlled and fed by a fuel spray, and the car is started by turning a switch and "stepping on the steam," and there is no starter, carburator or gear-shift, and generally speaking, it has the pep of the gas engine with the flexibility and smoothness of the steam engine.

If all this is true, the new bus should be popular. And if there can be such a marvel in a public bus, its principles may be applied to the private bus. The steam engine may not be obsolete yet for a while.

"Of what use are ants in the economy of life?" inquires a philosopher. Well, for one thing, when they get into the food you know it's a picnic.

We seem to gather from the triumph of Herr Vierkoetter that what men need to swim the Channel is "some bouillon, a little coffee and two bananas."

Possibly the real question about that strange young Hindu, Krishnamurti, is not whether he is a "messiah" but whether he can give us wise advice.

Crowds Throng Big Exposition

Missouri and Illinois Towns Represented at Greater St. Louis Fair.

St. Louis, Sept. 10.—Large crowds daily, including many visitors from Missouri and Illinois towns, are thronging the Greater St. Louis Exposition in Forest Park here. Where Your Patronage Is Appreciated.

Where our best advertising is done---

There is no newspaper advertising "talk" that can be half as compelling as the quality of merchandise a store sells, the low price asked for it, the appreciation of patronage shown, the decent treatment accorded customers—

So, our best advertising is done right here in the store.

When a customer is treated right—when that customer is sold the right kind of furniture at the right kind of a price, and is treated as a customer should be treated—it is only human nature that future purchases be made in that same store. Also, inasmuch as one good turn deserves another, it is only human nature when the customer recommends the store to friends.

We believe it is this policy that largely accounts for the very rapid growth of the Price business. At least a very high per cent of our trade comes from old customers and from friends who have been recommended by old customers. And we're mighty glad to have such a fine, solid foundation for our business.

She Bared Her Soul!

To the man whose kindly tolerance and sympathy have put thousands back on the road to happiness

AND she was one of hundreds who have done the same—told secrets she would not tell her mother—or perhaps her husband—but in the confessional of the Judge's chambers she revealed all. Her story and those of scores of others—men as well as women—are now being retold for society's good in

"The Moral Revolt" by Judge Ben B. Lindsey
Judge of the Family Court of Denver

This is the most candid and startling series of articles ever published in any magazine. Reasoning from the stories of real life told him in court day after day, Judge Lindsey has reached certain conclusions, and now he boldly asks: "Is a new code of sex morals being created?" It is a startling question—but a question that has heretofore existed unasked in the minds of all intelligent men and women; and it is no more startling than the evidence that Judge Lindsey offers in his great series of articles entitled: "The Moral Revolt."

When you have read the first of the Judge's articles and considered it, turn a few pages of the same magazine and read the first article in another astonishing series in which the internationally famous beauty and social leader—

Mrs. Philip Lydig Reveals Secrets of New York Society

ALMOST since girlhood, beautiful Mrs. Philip Lydig has been an unquestioned leader of New York's ultra-smart society. Now for the first time Mrs. Lydig proceeds to turn the spotlight on that society—telling in great detail why she finds it futile, false and corrupt. The statements she makes will astonish you—story after story of tragedies heretofore never publicly disclosed. If chronicles of the real lives of the prominently fashionable—heretofore known only to those on the inside of that group—are of interest to you, then you must read Mrs. Lydig's revealing article, "Marriage Without Love."

In these two remarkable series—the one by Mrs. Lydig, the other by Judge Lindsey—The Red Book Magazine for October inaugurates its new plan of adding the drama of Fact to the drama of Fiction—which latter is expressed by Rupert Hughes in his splendid novel, "We Live But Once," and by these other distinguished novelists and story-writers: Ruth Comfort Mitchell, James Francis Dwyer, Struthers Burt, Samuel Merwin, Leroy Scott, Thyra Samter Winslow, Robert Benchley, Wm. H. Osborne, Arthur K. Akers and Michael J. Phillips.

Plans Completed For Structure on Federal Highway No. 71 Near New Market, Mo.

This will eliminate all except one dangerous grade crossing between Kansas City and St. Joseph on this route.

This, according to Carl Brown, assistant chief engineer of the highway commission, will be the seventy-seventh important grade elimination since the enactment of the bond issue road law.

The new structure will be 585 feet long, of concrete, and will have a 22-foot clearance over the railroad. Its cost is estimated at about $60,000 and will be divided between the state and the railroad company.

Girl Steals Purse Then Tells Police

Money Taken In St. Louis Bank Given To Older Companion—Are Sent To Detention Home.

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—What to do with a 13-year-old girl who helped steal $100 and then told a large, sympathetic cop about it because she was sorry? That was the perplexing question facing police here today.

The girl timidly approached a police sergeant and whispered she had something to tell him. Instead of hearing the expected tale of a naughty boy pulling hair, the sergeant listened to the girl's story that she and a 14-year-old girl friend had stolen a purse containing $100 on the balcony of a bank.

She turned it over to an older girl who gave her $3.00 and her companion $10, she told the sergeant.

The sergeant immediately located the penitent girl's friend and the older girl to whom the money was turned over and both admitted the theft, police said. The older girl was taken to the matron's room at police headquarters and the two younger girls were taken to the detention home.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Burk of Pickering announce the birth of a daughter Saturday. The baby has been named Betty Jane.

Missouri's Entry Off to Call Hogs

Kansas City Man Goes To Omaha To Compete for National Calling Honors.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 10.—There were no bands or lodge patrols to see Hughie Henry off for Omaha last night where he hopes to win the hog calling championship of the world in competition with entrants from the pork belt states.

The lack of blaring trumpets and cheers of farewell was due to Hughie's earnest request.

"Boys," said Hughie, when informed that there would be a parade through downtown streets when he left for Omaha, "I don't want no parade. And don't hire Hiner's band. I know the way to the depot myself. I can find Omaha without music.

"I'm just a plain boy from the Ozarks and all that excitement might make me nervous and hurt my chances for winning the championship.

Hughie closed his training quarters yesterday. His only workout consisted of deep breathing exercises and breakfast.

"I'm not going to eat much," Hughie explained, "as I want to go into the contest hungry. It stands to reason that a hungry hog will readily recognize the call of a hungry man. I expect to play on the hog's sympathies. Misery loves company and a hungry porker ought to rush to my side when I go on the air.

"Because I'm going to be the hungriest man in Nebraska, barring those boys on a bread and water diet in jail."

Comment on the Uniform International Sunday School Lesson for September 12, 1926.
Read Exodus 35.

Wm. Southern, Jr.

It is not my desire to be called Colonel or General or Honorable or to wear decorative ribbons. I despise to march in a parade or to have my coat covered with badges and buttons.

There is, however, a title I would like to have and to deserve. I would like to be known as "Wise Hearted."

This term is repeatedly used about both men and women in the story of the experiences of Moses when he came to raise the money to build and equip the great tabernacle, the pattern of which was given to him by God in the Mount. Not everybody in the great congregation of Hebrews contributed. "Wise Hearted" men brought of their gold chains and rings and treasures and gave them freely and happily. "Wise Hearted" women sat for long days before looms and twisted little threads into strong twined linen and helped make colored leather, gave up ear rings and bracelets, all to help build and equip the new church.

I take it that the term "Wise Hearted" does not mean any great intellectual ability, it does not carry with it the idea of a college degree or a Greek letter badge. It may attach to the humblest and the most ignorant or to the wisest and most powerful. The wise hearted woman loves her home and her children and her church and is willing to give up her clubs and her career in public and her intellectual enjoyments if necessary because of her love for her church and what it represents.

The "Wise Hearted" man cares nothing whatever for place and power and wealth except as place and power and wealth shall be used as instruments by which he may make his life valuable to others, useful to all with whom he comes in contact and that he may live and die in the love of his fellows and in the serene knowledge which comes from the heart and not from the head, that he has done his part in the great plan of God.

We have all been through the throes of raising money for a new church building. The method has changed not at all since Moses' time. Indeed, I am sure that church board facing the job of raising funds for a new church building could not do better than to read carefully the 35th chapter of Exodus.

Moses called all the people together and told them what he wanted. They responded until he had to tell them he had enough and more. I have not heard in my time of such a response to such an appeal. Usually a new church is decorated with a debt.

In this case as now all the members did not give. Only the Wise Hearted. "Everyone whose heart was willing and everyone whom his spirit made willing."

A Wise Hearted man or woman is not a radical. It is not Wise Hearted to give more than you can afford and it is not wise hearted to give just as little as you can and get by. I despise the method of raising church funds by competition, setting down amounts where people may see and comment, exciting one to give as much as another. Many a man will make a liberal contribution to anything if he can be assured that his name will be listed in the paper. He simply charges it off to advertising and considers the publicity cheap at the price.

The Wise Hearted man gets a great deal more of pleasure and of joy from giving his money in the knowledge of the good it will do and does accomplish. He is really happy about it. Mere money can not buy happiness but the Wise Hearted man knows how to use what he has to buy happiness..

In this story of raising money for a new church building and its furnishings, it is plainly stated that everybody did not give. I have never known a church where every member of the congregation contributed to the church support. Always it is the same group which pays the bills. When the funds run short the Deacons know where to go and the ones who have already given most liberally are the ones who make up the deficit.

In one church I know, and I think it is not different from others, out of four hundred members on the rolls one hundred do not regularly contribute.

Some become very indignant at this situation and say it is not fair, but I have come to another idea. I am sorry for the one hundred, sorry because each one has missed something out of life and happiness. It is not the amount you give to the church which makes you happy, it is not what the church gets out of it in brick and stone and mortar, it is what the giver gets in life and happiness.

I feel sorry and can not help feeling a little contempt for the stingy man, the tight fellow whose pocket is sewed up and who never gives to anything. His soul shrivels and shrivels. People do not like to have him around. He is not considered a good citizen nor a good companion.

From a purely selfish standpoint the Wise Hearted person draws down large dividends. When the question of voting a large bonus to the men who fought overseas came up and was made a selfish proposition, a step upon which politicians who stayed at home expected to get into office, I was sad. The service the soldiers gave could not be measured in money nor in pensions.

I love a beautiful church and beautiful church furniture. I like to see the pastor dressed in an appropriate manner and do not object to robes. There must be a dignity and an earnestness about church services and we should be willing to give our best to the service of God. If our churches are not worth housing in lovely buildings and furnishing in beautiful equipment, they are heardly worth what we claim for them. Moses understood these things and the finest equipment possible was given to the tabernacle in the wilderness. The priests were dressed in the robes of royalty and decorated with the jewels of high price.

You must determine your own dividends. Church contributions are not a tax levy. They are free-will offerings. I do not want to know what anybody else gives. I do not want even unconsciously to measure my own giving by that of another. It is my individual responsibility.

Your happiness and your prosperity and your life hangs in the balance and is measured in proportion as you are Wise Hearted.

Christian Church Notes

Next Sunday night's service will be a Go Away to College service for all the young people of the town. This is a union service at the Christian Church and our orchestra will play.

Come to Sunday school on time—and stay for church.

We are enrolling members for a splendid new teacher-training class to begin soon. This will be a fully accredited course. We have had much experience in this work and hope for a large enrollment. This course which we give first, is especially valuable for parents as well as teachers and all parents are cordially urged to join in.

The pastor is planning a series of Sunday evening sermons for young people especially, though they will be equally good for old. These sermons will be an honest attempt to help young people in answering some of their most important questions. The first sermon will be on the evening of September 26 and the topic will be printed next week.

M. E. Church Notes

The services next Sunday night and the following Sunday night will still be union services and each night will be held in the Christian Church and Brother Ragsdale will be the preacher. This is our last week of this conference year. We go to conference next Tuesday morning to be gone over the following Sunday. On next Sunday morning we will hold our communion service of preaching. This being the last service of the year, we are urging the entire membership to be present.

This has been one of the most happy and congenial years of all my ministry. We have had a few heart aches, and some tears along the way but for the most part, we have had a delightful time. We are trying to build a program for next year that will be far better than this year. We are asking the hearty cooperation, sympathy and prayers in our endeavor.

The church grounds show a decided improvement, thanks to those who were so faithful in their efforts to better its appearance. Only sixteen at Sunday School last Sunday. However, that number was pretty good considering the weather conditions.

Next Sunday election of officers for both church and Sunday School, with a basket dinner, sandwiched in, at the noon hour, and a good afternoon program. We urge that every member be present, bring your dinner, have a day of fellowship with your friends and a day of service for your Lord.

For Men Only

If you are a MAN, the Men's Bible Class needs you. If you are not a man, the Men's Bible Class can make a MAN out of you, in either case, come, you will be welcomed.

DRAMATIC EVENTS IN BIBLE HISTORY : : By Walter Scott and Harlowe R. Hoyt

The Covenant with Jehovah Renewed.

Great was the wrath of Jehovah at the iniquity of the Israelites in worshipping the golden calf. Moses prayed that he alone might suffer for the sin of his people, and God promised that an angel would lead the wanderers to the land of Canaan, but that he would not accompany them.
One tent was pitched without the camp, where those who sought Jehovah might foregather. This was called Tent of Meeting. When Moses entered it, the pillar of cloud descended and stood at the door, there remaining while Jehovah spoke with him.
Forty days passed before the anger of Jehovah was appeased. Then once more he consented to go before Israel to the promised land. Moses, at his command, hewed two tablets from stone which he carried upon Mt. Sinai, where Jehovah passed before him and proclaimed anew the words of the commandments.
Thus was renewed the covenant between Jehovah and the Israelites. Thus did Jehovah show himself to his servant. When Moses came from the mountain top, bearing two tablets, his face shone so brightly that he was forced to veil it before his people would approach him.

The VANITY CASE

NEA FICTION

© 1926 by G P PUTNAM SONS

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

In Harbor Gardens, Long Island, in an elaborte bungalow, lived PERRY HEATH and his wife, MYRA.

At the time the story opens the Heaths were entertaining as house guests:

LAWRENCE INMAN, a distant relative of Myra's and, aside from Perry, the only heir to her considerable fortune, and

BUNNY MOORE, young, vivacious, golden-haired, an old friend of Myra's.

Myra Heath was a peculiar woman. She was cold, sarcastic. She did not love her husband, but seemed enamored of Inman. She never used cosmetics or dressed in colors. In fact, her hatred of color amounted to a passion. She collected rare old bottles and her latest was a whisky bottle which she was quite proud of but which aroused her artistic husband to scorn.

There is a growing intimacy between Perry Heath and Bunny. Myra, becoming provoked, declares that she has made her will in favor of Inman, cutting Perry off.

That night, after Bunny and Inman retire, Myra Heath alludes mysteriously to Perry's "secret." When Perry goes to bed, Inman comes down stairs, and he and Myra are discovered in each other's arms later by Perry.

The next morning, Mrs. Prentiss, who lives next door, was telling her nephew, Todhunter Buck, of some mysterious lights she had seen the night before in the Heath bungalow. While they are talking a loud scream from the Heath home interrupts their conversation.

That night Perry Heath, stealing downstairs, discovers his wife in Inman's arms and orders the latter out of the house by morning.

The next day the body of Myra Heath is found in the studio by a servant. A candle is burning at her head and feet, there is a big cut in her head and, strangest of all, her face is made up with cosmetics and she is dressed in outlandish colors.

HERRICK, the butler, after calling the doctor, steals some money from a drawer near the body and then discovers, at Myra's feet, a card marked, "The Work of Perry Heath."

The doctor, when he comes, finds that the death blow was struck with Myra's cherished whisky bottle. It is discovered then that Perry Heath is gone, his bed unslept in.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She saw the doctor pause suddenly, as he reached the studio door, and clench his hands, while his face took on a look of horror.

But he said no word, and strode over to the body that lay on the floor.

The candles had gone out; a black wick fallen over in a small pool of melted wax being all that remained in each tall candlestick.

For a few seconds, the man's piercing eyes took in the details, the card propped against one candlestick, the bizarre effect of the gay colored beads and scarf, the glaring tints of the make-up on the dead face, and the terrible wound on the temple, that was visible only in part.

Quickly, then, he stooped, and gently turned the head the better to examine this abrasion.

It was obvious to him at once that death had resulted from a sudden and powerful blow, delivered by a strong hand.

Also, the weapon used was in evidence.

Beside the fractured skull lay the broken fragments of a brown bottle of thick, heavy glass.

About to pick these up, Dr. Conklin thought better of it, and contented himself with looking closely at them.

"A brutal job!" he said, indignantly. "This woman was struck on the temple with this heavy bottle, and killed almost instantly! Who did it?"

His question was addressed to no one in particular, but as he raised his eyes, he discovered he had several auditors.

Bunny, wide-eyed and white-faced, had sunk into a chair, and was clutching at the window curtain nearest her.

Larry Inman had come in also, and stood, leaning against the mantel, his face set and horror-stricken.

Herrick was inside the room, on duty, but the other servants were hovering just outside the studio door, all more or less moaning their grief or murmuring their opinions.

"Where is Mr. Heath?" the doctor asked, rising from his examination. "Who is in charge here?"

There was a moment's silence and then Inman said, "We do not know where Mr. Heath is, doctor. He has not been seen this morning at all. In his absence I suppose I would better assume charge of things. I am a cousin of Mrs. Heath's. It is—is it—murder?"

Though he balked at the terrible word, every one listened breathlessly for the answer.

"Murder? Yes! Of the most brutal, dastardly type! Where is this woman's husband?"

He turned to the butler, who shook his head.

"Nobody knows, sir. Mr. Heath was here last night, but he is not here now. His bed seems not to have been slept in.

"Well, the further proceedings are not for me to conduct. I will tell the police, and they will take charge. Mr. Inman, will you call up the Harbor Park police station?"

But Inman turned this task over to Herrick. For one thing, Larry had no intention of taking orders from the family physician, and, too, he was much shaken as to nerves, and it was more than he could face, to call in the police to investigate the death of Myra, his beautiful cousin!

He made no apology for shifting the errand to another, and turned solicitously to Bunny, as he saw her face blanch afresh at the police call.

Dr. Conklin looked at the pair curiously. They were not at all friendly in their attitude toward him, and he wondered why.

CHAPTER VII.

Dr. Conklin was fairly well acquainted with the Heaths, for, on occasion, he had prescribed for their minor ailments, and had, too, once or twice met them socially.

He was a Gardens man himself, for, of course, no Garden would have a Park physician.

But the police had to come from the Park, and it was astonishing how quickly they managed to appear.

Three or four men arrived, but the coroner and a detective sergeant took the case in hand.

With a perfunctory nod at the brief summary Dr. Conklin gave him, the coroner set about his own examination of the body.

He had never known Myra Heath in life, and therefore, was not surprised at the pronounced make-up of her face.

But he showed his amazement at the candlesticks with their traces of burnt-out candles, and especially at the penned card.

"The Work of Perry Heath," he read, with an incredulous expression on his shrewd, small countenance. "Her husband, eh? Where is he?"

Informed that Heath was inexplicably missing, he nodded sagaciously.

"Made his getaway, did he? Well, it'll be a hard job to find him, for if he had the nerve to sign his handiwork, he must be well out of the neighborhood by this time. What say about how long she's been dead, Conklin? Some seven or eight hours, eh?"

"Hard to tell, Dr. Osborn. Perhaps your guess is about right. I'd put it eight, anyway."

"Well, seven or eight. It's nine now, —say she was killed 'long about two o'clock.

"I don't see how we can set it any more positively. The skull is fractured, you see—"

"Yes, beastly work! And with an old whisky bottle! Must have been a tramp thug—"

"Well, the bottle is no clue to the intruder. For that's one of Mrs. Heath's [redacted]

"Her bottle! This old booze holder?"

"Yes, she collected them. See the row of them in that cabinet?"

"My stars!" Osborn looked in amazement at the neat row of old liquor bottles on the shelf. "Whatever did she want of them?"

"They have a certain value to collectors. Anyway, I'm confident this was one of hers. I've seen her collection before, and I've heard her exult over certain specimens. Wasn't this bottle the property of Mrs. Heath?" he added, turning suddenly to Inman.

"Y—yes," Larry stammered, not so much ill at ease as startled by the abrupt question.

"Have you any idea who used it to brain her?" put in the coroner.

It was a pet device of Osborn's to fire an unexpected question at a witness, and watch its effect.

"I? No, indeed! How could I have?"

Larry had regained his composure, and was ready for any ordeal.

Mott, the detective sergeant, took up the matter then, and in a quiet, almost gentle tone, began to ask definite questions.

"Who discovered Mrs. Heath's body here?" he said.

"Katie, the parlor maid," Herrick answered.

"Where is she? Tell her to come here."

Herrick nodded to the girl, who came slowly into the room and stood before Mott.

"Tell the story of what happened," said Mott, gravely but not too sternly.

"Well, sir, I came down stairs and went to my work—"

"At what time?"

Katie flushed a little, and said, "I was a bit late, sir. I'm to be down at eight and it was ten or fifteen after."

"Not more than that?"

"No, sir. And I tided up the lounge, and dusted about a bit, then I came in here to do the same, and as soon as I got through the door I saw—that—" she pointed to Myra's body.

"What did you do?"

"I let out a yell that they must have heard over at the Park! I couldn't help it,—I was that scared, sir."

"Yes, you must have been startled. What next?"

"Then I just ran to the pantry to find Herrick, and I told him."

"You didn't stop to look at Mrs. Heath more closely, and you didn't—didn't touch her?"

"Goodness, no! Touch her? I should say not! I just rushed out of this room as quick as I could."

"Is this the gown Mrs. Heath was wearing last evening?"

"Yes, sir, the very same, only of course, she didn't have that scarf on, nor those beads. That's Miss Bunny's scarf."

"Make no remarks, except in answer to questions. When did you last see Mrs. Heath alive?"

"Last night, about half-past eight, sir. It was my evening out, and after I fixed the bridge table in here, I went out."

"Where did you go?"

"I went to the movies. Over in Garden Park."

"What time did you come home?"

Katie turned red. "I don't just know,—I didn't notice."

"Ah, you were later than you should have been?"

"A—a little."

"Katie's a good girl," Herrick spoke up for her. "She might have been a minute or two late, but nothing to do any harm."

"Never mind that now," Mott said. "When you came in, Katie, did you notice anything unusual about?"

"Well,—no, sir."

Clearly she had been about to make a different answer and suddenly changed her mind.

Again Mott said, "Never mind that, now," and proceeded with his queries.

"Do you recognize this bottle, Katie?" He pointed to the pieces without touching them.

"Oh, yes, sir."

Whose is it?"

"Why, it was Mrs. Heath's. The newest one she had. She set a deal by it, sir."

"Proud of it, was she?"

"Yes, sir. Said it was the finest of the whole bunch. Terrible lookin' things, I call 'em!"

"Who do you suppose used this bottle to kill your mistress?"

"Who but some horrid burglar? Comin' of course, to steal some of her precious old glass. She often said it was very valuable, sir."

"Yes, it is. And you assume a robber was after it and was discovered by Mrs. Heath, and he killed her?"

"How else?"

"Did you see any trace of the robber when you came in last night late, or this morning, either?"

"No, sir, I didn't notice anything."

"You wouldn't! Herrick, did you?"

"Did I what, sir?"

"Did you see any traces of an intruder when you opened up the house this morning?"

"That I did not, for why there weren't any such."

"You seem positive."

"Well, what I mean is, that there was no door or window opened or unlocked. I fastened them all myself, last night, and I found them just so this morning."

"Proving to your mind, that no intruder could have gotten in or out?"

"Proving that to anybody's mind, sir. I always lock up everything after the last one of the family goes upstairs. Sometimes that's pretty late, but last night it was fairly early."

"What time?"

"Not much more than eleven-thirty, sir. Mr. Heath, he was the last one to go upstairs. Then I went my rounds and every window and every door was fastened by me, I do assure you."

"Some other time, Herrick, I want more detailed account of those fastenings. But now, you declare that the house was so thoroughly locked up that no one could get in or out?"

"I do, sir."

"Then, how did Mr. Heath get out?"

"That's what's puzzling me. I ask you, sir, how did he get out? For get out he did, since he ain't now in the house. But how did he do it,—and why?"

"Those are questions for wiser heads than yours, Herrick. You saw him go upstairs?"

"Yes, sir. After Mrs. Heath had gone up and likewise, Miss Moore and Mr. Inman. Master was the last one up, and now where is he?"

The blank despairing look on the man's face would have been amusing had the matter been of less grave import.

"Could Mr. Heath have had a telegram or any sort of message that called him away late last night, or in the early morning hours?"

"He could have had messages, of course, but he couldn't get out of any door, and leave it locked behind him, on the inside. Nor out any window, for they all have patent catches and they were all locked."

"None left open for air?"

"There's patent ventilators to take care of that. Ever since the burglary scares two years or so ago, Mrs. Heath has been most particular about the locks everywhere."

"We'll go into all that later. Where, then, do you think Mr. Heath is at the present moment?"

"Laws, sir, if I only knew! But I can't think of any place he could be, or any way he could get there!"

Detective Mott transferred his attention to Inman, who had seated himself, turning his chair so that the body of Myra was not in his line of vision.

Mott looked at Larry a moment before he spoke to him, and his keen eye noted that Inman's hands clenched themselves involuntarily, and his whole body tensed a trifle, as if preparing himself for an ordeal.

SCHOOL ATHLETICS TO BE COMMENDED

A Program That Builds Endurance and Average Health for Pupils Is Better Than a System That Brings Forth a Few Experts.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

President Morgan of Antioch College says he abolished football to make room for athletics. He did not mean to reflect on the noble game of football, of course. What he had in mind is that it is better to have every student required to take regular exercise, though it may not be spectacular. This, he thinks, is bet[illegible] than developing a small number of super-trained expe[illegible]

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

It is just as important to teach the importance of good health and a strong body as it is to teach literature, and mathematics. I rejoice always when I hear about the efforts of teachers to improve the physical welfare of the pupils.

A short time ago I read the results of the health tests required of all Washington school children. To pass the test the child must have good posture, must know and practice certain health rules, must not be under or over-weight, and then must be able to perform certain exercises.

There are two physical exercise tests. For boys, the first test requires that he execute a 60-yard dash in 8 3-5 seconds, make a broad jump of 5 feet 9 inches, and chin the horizontal bar four times. The girls had to throw a basketball 30 feet, walk the balance beam 24 feet, and run a dash of 50 yards in 8 seconds.

In the second test, the boys had to throw a ball overhead 35 feet, chin the bar six times, and jump 6 feet 6 inches. The girls were required to run a potato race in 20 seconds, throw a ball into a goal two times out of five, and walk the balance beam 24 feet with a bean bag on the head.

The first test was passed by 2,763 boys and girls, and the second one by 1,311. This speaks well for the excellence of the training and particularly for its wide-spread benefits.

It is a great mistake to indulge in exercise which is so strenuous as to tax the heart, and other structures of the body. But everybody, young and old, should exercise moderately and sensibly every single day. Overstrain is dangerous, but systematic exercise is beneficial.

A sudden freakish notion to begin some strenuous system of exercise is particularly dangerous to persons in middle life or past it. Many a man has gone to a premature death because of such an experience.

In all matters relating to health, what we may call the middle route is the safe one to tread. Excesses in eating, in exercising, in sleeping—it matters not what thing we mention—in moderation all such things are good, but in excess they may become harmful, even dangerous.

It is said that the most uncommon kind of sense is common sense, but in health-getting and health-keeping certainly common sense must be exercised if you wish to live to a ripe old age.

Answers To Health Queries.

A. A. R. Q.—What would you advise in the case of a boy 16, who has no appetite, is constantly tired and lacking in pep and whose face is pimply?

A.—His diet and intestinal elimination are probably at fault. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A. E. J. D. Q.—I am a young man of 18 and have been told I have a slight tremor of the heart—is this dangerous? Can it be overcome?

A.—No, the trouble may be due to nervousness. Try to improve your health in general, avoiding undue excitement and over exertion and you will probably notice general improvement.

N. L. S. Q.—My sister is troubled with pleurisy. Is there a cure, and what would you suggest?

2.—What causes nervous headache which occurs after weak spells?

A.—Strapping the side is often effective. Pleurisy should always have careful medical attention.

2.—First of all, locate the cause of the weak spells. Have your blood pressure taken and then definite treatment can be advised.

Radio Solos Given by Garland White

In the preliminary broadcasting of WIJB, the radio station of the Northwest Missouri State Fair at Bethany, now in progress, two solos were sung by Garland N. White, formerly of Maryville. He sang "Little Mother of Mine" (Burleigh) and "On the Road to Mandalay" (Speaks). He was accompanied by Mrs. J. G. Hinkle and Miss Pauline Haas played a violin obligato to the first number.

While in Maryville, Mr. White sang in the community chorus and in the choir of the First Methodist Church. He studied voice nine months under Luther A. Richman of the music department of the State Teachers College.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—With the exception of September corn, grain prices did not get very far today on the Board of Trade here. Most operators were merely "evening up" in preparation for the publication of the American and Canadian government reports after the close.

Wheat closed ¼ to ½ cent above yesterday's final figures.

Both Manitoba and Saskatchawan reported better weather as did the American Northwest. The export business is thought to have been of firm volume, no futures were given out. Cash values were steady.

Commission houses succeeded in bidding up September corn to a close 1⅝ cents above that of yesterday.

There was little pressure in this pit. The posting of 10,000 bushels as out of condition was ignored. Cash values were ½ to 1 cent higher.

Oats was again a dull affair but closed ⅛ to ⅞ cent higher on the showing of corn.

Provisions were dull but registered good advances on the strength of the hig and grain markets.

BEARCATS LOOK GOOD

TEACHERS' FOOTBALL SQUAD CAN HANDLE PIGSKIN.

HAVE BEEN CAMPING

Cottages In Tourist's Park Housing Players This Week—Workouts On College Field.

After watching the State Teachers College football squad in practice this morning, it is safe to say that the Bearcats are starting their 1926 workouts without visible handicap. The College gridders worked for two hours this morning on the field, and they handled themselves and the pigskin in a manner which reflected the value of the week o ftraining which is almost at a close.

The Bearcats have been working twice daily on the College field. The practices so far have been confined to rudimentary football, for in this game the fundamental points are reflected in the playing of the team.

Kicking, passing, zig-zagging, blocking, and a form of tackling have been the menu for the daily gridiron meals. And the Bearcats are coming out of it. The first day they were a bit awkard. They showed that they had not handled a football since spring. But today the rough spots were apparently worked off. They handled the ball with a confidence this morning.

Tackling of a sort was participated in today. It wasn't the vicious, driving tackling that features a game. It was almost a reproduction of slow moving pictures. The Bearcats walked through the movements, working out the digging steps, the proper holds, and the manner of hitting the carrier of the ball.

All of this is highly worth while and will possibly make the team a surer-tackling outfit than ever before.

The week of training will end Saturday. Beginning next week, the Bearcats will practice but once daily, in the afternoon.

Coaches H. Frank Lawrence and Paul Jones were non-committant today. But they smiled as their charges went through this form of practice and that form of drill.

But the group of onlookers who watched the practice agreed that the Bearcats look the part of football players and talk of another championship to follow the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association title of last fall is already going the rounds.

substitutes if you seek the famous Quaker flavor

THE point to remember when buying breakfast oats is that only Quaker Oats have the rich Quaker flavor that you want.

One package of oats without that flavor may spoil your breakfasts for a week.

The price you pay is the same. Thus "trying" a substitute is a folly. Quaker flavor is the result of some 50 years milling experience. No other oats has it. Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed.

Get Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, or regular Quaker Oats as you have always known.

Your grocer has both kinds.
